May 2011 Newsletter

Spring is coming! It really is! The flowers are beginning to bloom, the trees are budding out, the grass is turning green, and the robins sing in the early morning. May is a joyful time, and this year the Easter season is just beginning in May. Spring flowers symbolize May. Because Easter was late this year and so Pentecost is not until the middle of June, we are putting red geraniums in the church on Mother's Day, May 8th, instead of Pentecost. You will find an order form in this newsletter and in the Easter and May 1st announcements.

The Cottage meetings are in full swing this month, beginning right after Easter. We hope you have attended or are planning to attend one soon. This is an opportunity for you to get to know me a little better in a small group setting and for to talk together about the church. Also, Sunday School and Preschool will be ending and having their closing celebrations. May is a glorious time to come and worship and to experience God's love bursting forth in beauty.

From the Pastor

Memorial Day Weekend I will be out of town. Sue and I are going to her old hometown of Fort Dodge, Iowa. It was where she grew up and where her parents grew up and were married. Her family has deep roots in Webster County, Iowa, and they were some of the earliest settlers there. Sue's parents made the difficult decision to move to Missouri when Sue was a junior in high school because there was no room to expand, the land available was too expensive, and the airport was encroaching around them. So, we are going back to Fort Dodge for a sad, yet hopeful event.

Many of you know that Sue's dad, Al Trusty, died the Friday after Thanksgiving last year. Her mom, Dorothy, died in March of 2001. We are going back to Fort Dodge to bury their ashes. Al was very instrumental in developing a park in Fort Dodge; so we are going to dedicate a park bench and plant some trees in the park in their memory. We have a service at the Lutheran Church in Fort Dodge where Al was baptized and confirmed, and where they were married and all eight of their children were baptized. Then, we will bury their ashes in the Trusty family plot. But it will be the planting of the trees in the park that will most mark who they were.

I wish that you could have known Al and Dorothy. Al could stick his thumb into the ground and it would grow. Well into his late seventies Al was still planting trees. He planted trees wherever he went. He always said that you plant a tree for future generations, not for yourself. He left a legacy of trees in Iowa and Missouri, and even in Kansas where we lived for a while. Dorothy never knew a stranger and in a few moments of speaking with her you would be certain that you knew her for years. She said that they could have been wealthy or have children. They decided to have children. They had eight; she wanted twelve. Whatever they touched, blossomed and grew.

In May, I think about Al and Dorothy, and not only because of the event at the end of the month. They farmed the land and in May Al was busy planting. He had a greenhouse and sold plants. We have a peony that he cultivated, planted behind the parsonage. At this time of year Al was always out, planting. He loved being out in God's creation and caring for it.

The Easter season recalls for us transformation and new life given to us in Jesus Christ. It is a hopeful time that in spite of the reality of death, there is always life in Christ. God gives us a new creation like that first morning. Easter recalls that first creation and invites us to renew our lives and to be recreated. Spring is in full bloom in May and re-imagines Easter every year. May will be a good time to plant some trees, to recall the lives of two of God's children, and to celebrate the Easter life we have in Jesus Christ.

Enjoy the new spring season this May. It is the Easter season, so celebrate life and living in Jesus Christ. And while you are at it, maybe you will want to plant something like a tree that will return year after year. It will remind you of the new life in God's creation.

A Blessed Easter,

Pastor Mike

Youth Retreat: The 7th and 8th graders along with a high school student and Linda Berry, Nancy Mendoza, and Paul Andersen attended a Confirmation retreat at Wesley Woods in Williams Bay, WI. The weather cooperated on Saturday with a beautiful day. We stayed in a two story home on the property of the camp. Games, devotions, discussion, free time, campfire, worship were a part of the retreat. We also took time to do a service project of going to a care facility in Williams Bay and sang some songs, then played table games with the residents. Some comments from the young people of what they liked about being on a retreat...

The activities, fun Olympics, bus ride, campfire, exploring, free time, fun to be together, hanging out with friends, relaxed, Some negative – “too boring” at times (probably Bible study), would like more free time Mrs. Mendoza thought – “beautiful setting”.

Vision Committee update...

Cottage Meetings – the Vision Committee is setting up “cottage groups” to meet and discuss plans and/or concerns for Trinity. It is also a “follow up” on the survey. Even if you did not take the survey, everyone will be placed in a group geographically with a designated time and day. We are contacting individuals either by email or mail to ask if they would “host” their group either in their home or meet at church. The time period is about 1 – 2 hours. Pastor Mike will lead a short Bible study, discuss survey results and talk about Trinity’s future direction. In what direction would you like to see Trinity go – over the next year, 3 years, 5 years, 10 and so on....

Your invitation will soon follow – please RSVP to your host with positive response!

recipe passed down from Gloria Flathom who made them for the council meeting – “delicious!”

Children and TV: Limiting your child's screen time

Are you concerned about how much time your child spends watching TV or playing video games? Although some screen time can be educational, it's easy to go overboard. Consider this guide to children and TV, including what you can do to keep your child's screen time in check.

The effects of too much screen time

The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends limiting a child's use of TV, movies, video and computer games to no more than one or two hours a day. Too much screen time has been linked to:

- Obesity. Children who watch more than two hours of TV a day are more likely to be overweight.
- Irregular sleep. The more TV children watch, the more likely they are to resist going to bed and to have trouble falling asleep.
- Behavioral problems. Elementary students who spend more than two hours a day watching TV or using a computer are more likely to have emotional, social and attention problems. Exposure to video games also increases the risk of attention problems in children. Children who watch excessive amounts of TV are more likely to bully than children who don't.
- Impaired academic performance. Elementary students who have TVs in their bedrooms tend to perform worse on tests than those who don't.
- Violence. Too much exposure to violence on TV and in movies, music videos, and video and computer games can desensitize children to violence. As a result, children may learn to accept violent behavior as a normal part of life and a way to solve problems.
- Less time for play. Excessive screen time leaves less time for active, creative play.

How to limit screen time

- Keep TVs and computers out of the bedroom. Children who have TVs in their bedrooms watch more TV and videos than children who don't. Monitor your child's screen time and the websites he or she is visiting by keeping computers in a common area in your house.
- Don't eat in front of the TV. Allowing your child to eat or snack in front of the TV increases his or her screen time. The habit also encourages mindless munching, which can lead to weight gain.
- Set school day rules. Most children have limited free time during the school week. Don't let your child spend all of it in front of a screen. Avoid using TV and video or computer games as a reward for finishing homework and chores.
- Talk to your child's caregivers. Encourage other adults in your child's life to limit your child's screen time, too.
- Suggest other activities. Rather than relying on screen time for entertainment, help your child find other things to do. Consider classic activities, such as reading, playing a sport or trying a new board game.
- Set a good example. Be a good role model by limiting your own screen time.
- Unplug it. If screen time is becoming a source of tension in your family, unplug the TV, turn off the computer or put away the video games for a while. You might designate one day a week a screen-free day. To prevent unauthorized TV viewing, put a lock on your TV's electrical plug.

Become an active participant

- Make viewing an event. Rather than keeping the TV on all of the time, treat watching TV as though you were planning to see a movie in a theater. Choose a show and pick a specific time to watch it.
- Plan what your child views. Instead of flipping through channels, seek quality videos or use a program guide to select appropriate shows. Pay attention to TV Parental Guidelines — a system that rates programs based on suitability for children. Make a list of the programs your child can watch for the week and post it in a visible spot, such as near the TV or on the refrigerator. Use parental control settings on your home computer. Preview video games before allowing your child to play them.
- Watch with your child. Whenever possible, watch programs together — and talk about what you see.
- Record programs and watch them later. This will allow you to skip or fast-forward through commercials selling toys, junk food and other products, as well as pause a program when you want to discuss something you've watched — such as a depiction of family values, violence or drug abuse. When watching live programs, use the mute button during commercials.
- Choose video games that encourage physical activity. Better yet, make the games a family experience.

It can be difficult to start limiting your child's screen time, especially if your child already has a TV in his or her bedroom or your family eats dinner in front of the TV. It's worth the effort, however. By creating new household rules and steadily making small changes in your child's routine, you can curb screen time and its effects.
